

Ed Livingstone

Senior Associate

I am a senior associate at Fox Williams. I specialise in employment, partnerships and LLPs, and professional services regulation. I work across the professional services and employment teams at Fox Williams and act for firms, partners and employees in all aspects of employment and partnership law, both contentious and non-contentious, across a range of sectors.

Ed's practice within the Professional Services Group covers a broad range of legal and regulatory issues facing professional services firms, including both domestic and international legal businesses. He has gained particular expertise in relation to solicitors' regulation (including alternative business structures), partnerships, LLPs, and the contract law issues facing professional services firms. He also advises partners and firms in relation to partnership and LLP disputes, whether in the civil courts, the employment tribunal or in arbitration.

Ed's employment practice includes litigation in tribunals and the High Court, acting for both employer and employee. Ed advises both employers and employees within a range of sectors including professional and financial services, technology and fintech, retail, advertising and music. He has particular experience in a broad range of legal matters such as discrimination, amending terms and conditions of employment, TUPE and other employment aspects of corporate transactions, settlement agreements, mediations, whistleblowing and unfair and wrongful dismissal. He has also developed an expertise in advising on restrictive covenants, confidentiality and other employee competition matters both before and after termination of employment.

Ed is listed in Chambers 2024 as an associate to watch for both contentious and non-contentious partnership and as a rising star in the Legal 500 for Partnership.
